25th March. In regard to the long continued drought in the North of China, matters are coming to a crisis. The Court has been moved to issue orders to have the administration of the country overhauled, with the view of detecting in what respects Honvon is offended and why such a dire punishment is metad out to poor China. The entire expenses of the Court are to be carefully scrutinised and the greatest economy exercised; wherever the slightest reduction can be made, it is to be made, and the proceeds hunded to the poor famishing multitudes. In the meantime, twenty wan of taels and sixteen wan of piculs of rice are ordered for Shansi and Honan. The people at the capital are getting alarmed at the persistent drought, and I saw toars in the eyes of not a few, as the Gazette was read the other day whorein the Empresses do clare the sad condition of things and be wail the terrible calamity. FOR LOVE OF ART It depends very much on the motives nicthods they take of showing their appreciation or of airing their knowledge benefit to any appreciable degree those for whom their wisdom is paraded. Should the motives be purely selfish, the pleasure or benefit derived is confined to the performer. Should the lover of art be actuated by a desire to inform his presumably weaker brethren a good object is obtained, though in return for his well-meant information the instructor is hore. First we may endeavour to realise what is the motive power that scams to constrain a purely selfish man to constitute himself an annoyance to his neighbours, and all for love of art—the special branch of ar
